

SOLID crafts

Not charity; fair and honest work.

This lovely handmade piece has been skillfully made by local Indian women from Jharkhand, a very poor region in the North-East of the country. The women are united by Solid Crafts in a fairtrade textile workshop that provides meaningful and decent work for these vulnerable and underprivileged but strong women. They make beautiful handmade textiles which ignite hopes of a brighter future. If you empower women, you empower a whole community.

Your unique vintage kantha kimono jacket = her future!

SOCIO ECONOMIC

Solid's workshop in India creates sustainable jobs for vulnerable women. They get the opportunity to learn a trade and become a skilled weaver. By earning a fair wage, they can escape the poverty cycle and become more independent.

FAIR

Fair wages, equal opportunities, safe working conditions & creating a positive impact on the world is what we strive for; always!

ECO AND SUSTAINABLE

Your handmade Indian vintage kantha kimono jacket is made entirely of sustainable, environmentally-friendly and animal-friendly materials. Recycled saree: Indian women have been using their sewing and weaving skills for years to repurpose traditional saree fabric. Worn and discarded sarees have a second life. They are carefully washed and reused. Recycling and upcycling: the alternative for those who care about the planet, and appreciate our environment. With your purchase of this kimono jacket you give Indian women living in poverty a real chance of a better future! For her and her family.

100% handmade with love, especially for you.
